Shanghai Homes (上海)

Shanghai Homes: Palimpsests of Private Life, by Jie Li. Jonathan Mirsky on one family’s memories of life in a Shanghai alleyway, from Mao to the modern day. In this “part microhistory, part memoir”, Harvard University academic Jie Li recounts vividly and often poignantly the careers, ordeals and stories of several generations of her family, from Shanghai in the pre-Mao era, through the Communist agonies and into the reformist period.

Shanghai Homes: Palimpsests of Private Life, by Jie Li ...

At once personal and scholarly, intimate in tone but intellectually rigorous, Shanghai Homes is that unique work that effortlessly moves between and cuts across several disciplinary areas: family history, Cultural Revolution politics, urban architecture, and above all personal and collective memory and its place in post-Socialsit and globalized China. I find the human images of these 'palimpsests' especially heart-warming.
