Once invited, the vampire cannot be uninvited unless the ownership of the house changes. In The Vampire Diaries, vampires were not created by the planet compared to the other species. As a defense, nature attacks the vampires with sunlight, wood, vervain, and other elements (for example, water weakens vampires in the books).

Why do vampires have to be invited in? - Science Fiction ...

The vampires in Vampires vs. the Bronx must be invited into a residence to enter it, and to circumvent that weakness they've gone into real estate. When Miguel forbids a vampire from entering his apartment, the vampire does some shady cash deals to buy the building from the landlord, which counts as an invitation.

Must Be Invited - TV Tropes

Some traditions hold that vampires cannot enter a home unless formally invited in. This may have been an early form of the modern "stranger danger"

An Invitation is a magical weakness of Original vampires, vampires, and vampire-hybrids that prevents vampiric beings from entering personally owned homes. In order for a vampiric being to enter any owned house, whether they're humans, witches, werewolves, or doppelgängers, they must first be invited by the owner. Once invited, the vampire cannot be uninvited unless the ownership of the house ...
