The Indian Writing magazine ran irregularly from 1940 to 1945. Ostensibly a literary magazine, Indian Writing was a platform for the radical, anti-colonial, broadly Marxist South Asian activists based in London to articulate their critique of Indo-British relations, alongside their own views on politics and culture, which would have been seen as extremist at the time.

anti-imperialism | Making Britain

The Progressive Writers' Association was established in London in 1935 by Indian writers and intellectuals, with the encouragement and support of some British literary figures.
