Soil color does not affect the behavior and use of soil; however, it can indicate the composition of the soil and give clues to the conditions that the soil is subjected to. Soil can exhibit a wide range of colour; grey, black, white, reds, browns, yellows and greens. Varying horizontal bands of colour in the soil often identify a specific soil horizon. The development and distribution of color in soil results from chemical and biological weathering, especially redox reactions. As the primary mi

The actual cause of color variation is due to the presence or absence of aluminum compounds in the soil the flowers are growing in. Aluminum is a plant nutrient that is only available to plants when the soil pH is low (having a pH value of less than 6). It is unavailable at higher pH levels. When aluminum is present within the plant, the flower color will be blue. When aluminum is absent, the flowers will be pink.
