Montessori Sensorial Activities New Montessori

Montessori sensorial activities are those which refine the five senses – tactile, visual, auditory, olfactory, and gustatory senses. Children are particularly receptive to developing their senses from ages 2-6, and it's important to give children at those ages as many sensorial experiences as possible. Montessori sensorial materials are carefully designed.

Montessori Sensorial Materials What are Montessori sensorial materials? These materials were brilliantly designed by Dr. Maria Montessori in the late 1800's to help a child absorb abstract information, sharpen their senses, and classify their environment all while using these concrete hands-on manipulatives.

List of Montessori Sensorial Materials for Ages 2.5 to 6.5 ...

Dr. Maria Montessori believed that children began having sensorial experiences at birth. According to Dr. Montessori's studies, as children grow up, they explore and learn by interacting with their environment through their senses. This unique period in a child's development happens between the ages of birth and six years old.

The Importance of Sensorial Materials in Montessori ...

Sensorial activities are designed to isolate and materialise properties of physical matter. Each activity appeals to a corresponding sense organ. Each set must be complete and in proportion. The child is born with her sense perception at a relatively early stage, she must learn to distinguish people from objects, one face from another, her father's voice, and as she is still learning to comprehend she absorbs all her impressions into her Mnene.

The Purposes of the Sensorial Exercises - Montessori Commons

Montessori saw the importance of the manipulation of objects to aid the child in better understanding his environment. Through the child's work with Sensorial material, the child is helped to make abstractions, he is helped in making distinctions in his environment, and the child is given the knowledge not through word of mouth, but through his own experiences.
