A compact dual-band patch antenna with independent tuning of both frequencies is introduced. The frequency agility is achieved by inserting two varactor diodes into the radiating patch, while the antenna miniaturisation is realised by shorting one patch edge using metallised vias. Simulated and measured results are in good agreement.

The project is developing an X-band transmitter (8.025GHz to 8.4GHz) using a high-speed baseband processor, coded and modulated to the latest CCSDS standards, in a compact highly integrated and power efficient design. The modulation drives a nonlinear SSPA followed by an integrated post-amplification RF shaping filter (as specified by ECSS-50-05C).
