How does the electron configuration of an atom change when it gains or loses an electron to become an ion? The answer to this important question depends on the location of the atom in the Periodic Table. For the representative elements (s- and p-blocks) the electrons are always removed in the opposite order that they were filled. For example, the last electron added in the electron configuration of magnesium is the second 3s-electron. Mg + would have a configuration of 1s 2 2s 2 2p 6 3s 1.
