The first lessons in beekeeping are that everyone should keep bees! Everyone! Seriously, not only are bees amazing for your garden and the planet because they fertilize plants and ensure that we can all live well on the earth, but bees produce honey and there is nothing finer than fresh honey. So, that means everyone needs a copy of Keith S Delaplane's book First Lessons In Beekeeping.

Simply place your container of honey in a pan of warm water (approx. 130 degrees F) or in a sunny spot in your home. This will liquefy your honey. Be sure not to boil the honey as this can ruin the taste. Rotating honey is simple when substituting it for sugar, but it can be stored for a lengthy amount of time.
