The suspension on Alfa's 145/146 is relatively simple with McPherson struts at the front and radius arms at the rear. The lower front wishbones (145/146 lower wishbone replacement guide) wear on the inner end at the front and this will often show up in worn inner edges of the front tyres. While the bearings on the radius arms will wear if the car has been used on country lanes where the ingress of dirt can cause premature wear.

The front wing support rusts away from the bottom up. To help

over come this problem we are producing repair sections made from stainless steel. Simply cut off the old rotten section and replace with new. Ideally it would be welded in place but you could use rivets, nuts and bolt or even self tapping screws to hold it in place if you wanted to. The section is a copy of a 156 support but can be used on 155/146 and 145 models with little or no modification.

The Alfa Romeo 145 and 146 were Fiat Tipo-based replacements for the slightly maligned 33. The new car, which really kicked off the trend for putting distance between three- and five-door versions of the same car, looked striking, and - like the 164 before it - also managed to look very different from its Fiat and Lancia bretheren. The complement its individual external styling, the 145/146 received an all new interior, with a most interesting dashboard design that was dramatically cut-away ...
