The author asserts that providing basic security must be the first priority in all foreign policy considerations, even ahead of efforts to democratize. He sets out essential guidelines for a foreign policy that makes sense in the real world, builds on moral principles, and creates the possibility of establishing positive relationships with Muslim nations and all others.

Security First: For a Muscular, Moral Foreign Policy ...

The focus on Security First as the guiding principle of U.S. foreign policy does not refer, as followers of narrow realism might have it, only to the security of the United States and its allies. The Primacy of Life principle places a responsibility on the major powers not only to ensure basic security for their own peoples, but also to contribute to the basic security of other peoples.
