The Universe, the Gods, and Men by Jean-Pierre Vernant

The assumption that God Created the Universe, implies that there was time when God existed and the Universe did not. So, at that time, God could not have been either part of the Universe, or the Universe. So, before the Act of Creation, God was clearly totally separate from the Universe. The Universe did not exist.

God and the Universe

The universe/multiverse exists upon cosmic principles apart from God and co-eternal with Him. But because God's material existence is based upon His own resurrection physics, not normal cosmic physics, God must use solely the latter to "create" real world cosmic objects. Matter/energy has always existed, upon which God works.

The belief that God became the Universe is a theological doctrine that has been developed several times historically, and holds that the creator of the universe actually became the universe. Historically, for versions of this theory where God has ceased to exist or to act as a separate and conscious entity, some have used the term pandeism, which combines aspects of pantheism and deism, to refer to such a theology. A similar concept is panentheism, which has the creator become the universe only

The Difference Between God and the Universe. Christians acknowledge the power of the spiritual realm, but see something else at work. While the God of the Bible certainly has power to shape the spiritual forces in our lives, he also reveals himself in a distinctly unique way. The prophet Elijah experienced this firsthand in the mid 9thC BC.

Talk:The Universe, the Gods, and Men - Wikipedia

If it is said that God is eternal but it is also necessarily true that the universe is not eternal, then it cannot be the case that God and the universe are one and the same. God is not eternal. Proposition: God and the universe are one and the same. This would mean that there can be no distinguishing between God and the universe since both are the same thing. This would mean that to live in the universe would mean to live inside of God. This would mean that since we are part of the universe ...

The Universe as God - Gestalt Reality

If God is a person, it's unclear what this means or how it's true. But if God is the Universe, then in the most literal sense, God is indeed the Alpha, Omega, and everything in between. You could also call God "the Father" of everything, which is essentially the same idea as being the Alpha and the Omega.
