When hot molten magma rises up at mid-ocean ridges to form new ocean crust rock, magnetic mineral grains that contain iron will orient themselves in-line with the current magnetic field. When the rock cools down, the minerals retain their original magnetic orientation even if the earth's magnetic field reverses.

Paleoclimatology is the study of climates for which direct measurements were not taken. As instrumental records only span a tiny part of Earth history, the reconstruction of ancient climate is important to understand natural variation and the evolution of the current climate. Paleoclimatology uses a variety of proxy methods from the Earth and life sciences to obtain data previously preserved within rocks, sediments, boreholes, ice sheets, tree rings, corals, shells, and microfossils. Combined wi
