Zoomorphic: New Animal Architecture: New Animal ...

Zoomorphic architecture is the practice of using animal forms as the inspirational basis and blueprint for architectural design.

"While animal forms have always played a role adding some of the deepest layers of meaning in architecture, it is now becoming evident that a new strand of biomorphism is emerging where the meaning derives not from any specific representation but from a more general allusion to biological processes." The practice is said by some to be a reaction against some of the mod

Zoomorphic architecture - Wikipedia

Able at last to break out from the constraints-both physical and ideological-that favoured rectilinear form, architects are going beyond the merely organic in shape to create a new biological baroque. Zoomorphic provides the evidence for this astonishing phenomenon, featuring buildings that resemble birds and fishes, shrimps and whales, armadillos and anteaters, sea sponges and sea urchins. More importantly, it explains why this building bestiary is right for the times.

Zoomorphic architecture everything2.
Zoomorphism is an emerging movement in building design, where buildings are inspired by shapes of animals. Animals as inspiration for architects has been around for a long time, but because of computeraided design and new materials available today, architects are able to design much more freely.

What Is Zoomorphic Architecture

Zoomorphic: New Animal Architecture Victoria and Albert Museum, London, September 2003-January 2004 This innovative and surprising exhibition places architectural models alongside stuffed animal specimens (borrowed from the Natural History Museum across the road), dramatically illustrating the contemporary revolution in architectural form.
