Love Power And Justice The

Power at its best is love implementing the demands of justice, and justice at its best is love correcting everything that stands against love." — The Reverend Doctor Martin Luther King, Jr.

Love, Power, and Justice | Karla McLaren

With Paul Tillich we have an interpretation of love and justice that is closer to that of Rauschenbusch, insofar as both reject a stark antithesis between the two concepts, but Tillich's analysis also differs in dramatic ways from Rauschenbusch. Tillich's methodology is reflected in the structure of Love, Power, and Justice. After identifying problematic "confusions" in popular understandings of each of the three concepts, Tillich's next three chapters offer "an ontology" of ...

William Hatcher: Love Power and Justice - YouTube

The inability of the modern mind to see this connection between love and power is the measure of its inability to understand the true dimensions of either love or power. As Paul Tillich put it in the introductory chapter to Love, Power, and Justice, "It is unusual to take the word 'confusion' into the title of a chapter. But if one has to ...

Love and Power - Hans J. Morgenthau, Commentary Magazine

Justice is the mediating principle between absolute love and the power principles of society — the relative embodiment of love in social structures. For large groups the highest goal is justice rather than love. The relation between love and justice is dialectical. Justice is love in realizable action.

Chapter 5: Love and Justice - Religion Online

"Power without love is reckless and abusive, and love without power is sentimental and anemic. Power at its best is love implementing the demands of justice, and justice at its best is power correcting everything that stands against love." — Martin Luther King Jr.

Quote by Martin Luther King Jr.: "Power without love is ...

Very often justice and love are understood as distinct and even opposing values and aims. On the one hand, justice is commonly depicted as harsh judgment, as punishment without mercy. On the other hand, love is perceived as sentimentality where wrong-doing is simply overlooked without consequence.

Where Love and Justice Meet

God's love, however, desires humans to be restored to fellowship with him. The offer of Jesus Christ as the atonement for sin means that both the justice and the love of God have been maintained," writes Millard Erickson. ¹ When each attribute is understood in light of the other, love and justice are harmonious.

God's Love and Justice

The principles of love, power, and justice are applied to God only symbolically. Because they are principles of being and God is the ground or abyss of being, we can only speak symbolically of "God" (the symbolic persona with which we orient matters of ultimate concern) and God's love, power, and justice. In this final chapter, Tillich absolutely blazes through a hyper-condensed version of his systematic theology.

Paul Tillich Resources - Boston University

"Ontological" means "the study of being." Tillich says love, power and justice are united in the structure of being(using philosophical terms)or united in the heart of God (paraphrasing from his Systematic Theology--Tillich doesn't say much about God in this book). When love, power and justice are separated in a situation, it becomes unstable. "Being" (or God) is the power that drives the situation toward stability--that is, toward a situation where love, power and justice are in balance.
